OneBridge Appoints James Kern as President

Industry Veteran Brings Financial Services, Strategic Relationship Expertise to Payments Processor

INDIANAPOLIS (February 1, 2007) – OneBridge, a credit and debit card processor for financial institutions nationwide, announced today the appointment of Jim Kern as president. Kern joins OneBridge most recently from serving as senior vice president and general manager of Open Solutions' banking division, where he was responsible for sales, sales support, account management and professional services.

As president of OneBridge, Kern will focus on building and growing client and partner relationships, as well as guiding strategic development and overseeing the executive management team.

"I am confident that Jim has the kind of experience and expertise needed to take OneBridge to the next level as we look to the future," said OneBridge CEO, David Becker. "His successful track record in the financial services industry, coupled with his understanding of the complexities associated with payment processing make him an ideal leader for OneBridge."

Prior to Open Solutions, Jim was the vice president and general manager of British Telecom's Syntegra Financial Trading Systems Americas' group, providing voice and data integration services to the world's largest financial and trading organizations. He has also served in senior leadership roles with leading software and outsourcing services provider to the banking industry, BISYS Information Services and credit union data processor, re:Member Data Services.

"OneBridge's solutions and services are the best in the industry," said Kern. "I look forward to working with the executive team to grow the business and continue providing innovative solutions to our clients."

Jim holds a Bachelor's degree from the University of Connecticut and a Master's degree from Madison University.
