OneBridge Adds Visa payWave to Its' Suite of Solutions

Card Processor Introduces Contactless Payment Processing

INDIANAPOLIS (July 25, 2007) - OneBridge, a credit and debit card processor for financial institutions nationwide, has added contactless payment processing to its suite of payment processing solutions. With the addition of this solution, OneBridge's clients are now able to issue Visa payWave as an added feature of their credit and debit card programs. By adding contactless technology and the Visa payWave feature to their cards, OneBridge clients will be at the forefront of the latest evolution in payments.

"The ability to add the contactless feature to their cards is an attractive benefit for our clients. It will be another step in their strategies to grow their card programs," said Jim Kern, OneBridge President. "As early adopters they will differentiate themselves in the marketplace which will lead to increased cardholder acquisition and usage as they capture spending at merchants that are historically cash-heavy."

"Contactless payments are another way our clients can tighten the management of their card programs. We pride ourselves on offering clients very comprehensive risk management opportunities. We're thrilled to add Visa's payWave to our payment processing solutions," said Nancy Linxwiler, OneBridge Vice President of Product Development and Management.
